A Comprehensive Curriculum: Fostering Excellence in Internal Medicine

The Baton Rouge General Internal Medicine Residency program boasts a meticulously designed curriculum that emphasizes a robust, well-rounded education. Residents receive extensive hands-on experience across diverse medical settings, ensuring they are prepared to handle the complexities of modern internal medicine.

Core Rotations: The program provides comprehensive rotations through key areas like cardiology, gastroenterology, nephrology, endocrinology, and pulmonology. These rotations are strategically designed to build a strong foundation in the core principles of internal medicine. Residents work closely with experienced specialists, learning advanced diagnostic techniques and treatment protocols.

Subspecialty Exposure: Beyond core rotations, residents benefit from exposure to a variety of subspecialties, including infectious disease, hematology/oncology, rheumatology, and neurology. This breadth of experience helps residents develop a broad understanding of the field and identify potential areas of interest for future specialization.

Emphasis on Procedural Skills: The program places a strong emphasis on developing proficient procedural skills. Residents participate in procedures relevant to internal medicine, including central line placement, paracentesis, and thoracentesis, under the close supervision of experienced faculty. This practical, hands-on training is crucial for developing confident, competent physicians.

Ambulatory Care Experience: A significant portion of the residency is dedicated to ambulatory care. Residents gain valuable experience in outpatient settings, interacting with patients in a less acute setting, learning to manage chronic illnesses, and providing preventive care. This real-world experience is critical in preparing residents for a diverse range of clinical settings.

Research Opportunities: The program encourages residents to engage in research activities. They are given the opportunity to participate in ongoing research projects, collaborate with faculty on research initiatives, and potentially present their findings at national conferences. This fosters critical thinking skills and prepares residents for future academic pursuits.

However, alarmingly high rates of clinician burnout in the United States are detrimental to the quality of care being provided, harmful to individuals in the workforce, and costly. It is important to take a systemic approach to address burnout that focuses on the structure, organization, and culture of health care. Taking Action Against Clinician Burnout: A Systems Approach to Professional Well-Being builds upon two groundbreaking reports from the past twenty years, To Err Is Human: Building a Safer Health System and Crossing the Quality Chasm: A New Health System for the 21st Century, which both called attention to the issues around patient safety and quality of care. This report explores the extent, consequences, and contributing factors of clinician burnout and provides a framework for a systems approach to clinician burnout and professional well-being, a research agenda to advance clinician well-being, and recommendations for the field.
